How do you write Tibetan language? Tibetan writing does not use spaces between words; instead, it is broken up into syllables. It also has very few punctuation marks in common usage. Tibetan is written in various scripts, just like how English may be printed, written in cursive, written in shorthand, and so on.

How are you translate in Tibetan language?

Is Tibetan a hard language to learn? Many people think the Tibetan language is a hard language to learn for English speakers. However, it is only hard to learn as much as other languages. One simply needs to be familiar with the rules of the language, from vocabulary to grammar and tone. The script itself is not too hard to learn.

What language is closest to Tibetan? The two closely related language groups, Hmong and Mien (also known as Miao and Yao), are thought by some to be very remotely related to Sino-Tibetan; they are spoken in western China and northern mainland Southeast Asia and may well be of Austro-Tai stock. Are you a student?
