What was the most painful thought Frederick had about escaping to freedom? It is my opinion that thousands would escape from slavery, who now remain, but for the strong cords of affection that bind them to their friends. The thought of leaving my friends was decidedly the most painful thought with which I had to contend.

What does Douglas regret in his memories of his parents? In his Narrative of the Life, Douglass does not state any regrets about his parents, only contempt for the circumstances in which he and so many other slaves found themselves. He mentions at the outset that he was separated from his mother while he was still an infant, which he notes was 'a common custom.

What two painful thoughts haunt Douglas? Two painful thoughts that haunt Douglass is if he would ever leave his friends. The second thought is the idea that he may be taken away again and become a slave. Douglass changed his name when he got to New Bedford because so many people were named Johnson and he wanted to be different.

What did Abraham Lincoln say to Frederick Douglass? ' I said, 'Mr. Lincoln, I must not detain you with my poor opinion, when there are thousands waiting to shake hands with you. ' 'No, no,' he said, 'you must stop a little, Douglass; there is no man in the country whose opinion I value more than yours. I want to know what you think of it?

What were Frederick Douglass's powerful words?

What did Frederick Douglass do to end slavery? In 1861, the nation erupted into civil war over the issue of slavery. Frederick Douglass worked tirelessly to make sure that emancipation would be one of the war's outcomes. He recruited Black men to fight in the U.S. Army, including two of his own sons, who served in the famous 54th Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry.

Who were the worst slaveholders according to Douglass? For of all slaveholders with whom I have ever met, religious slaveholders are the worst. I have ever found them the meanest and basest, the most cruel and cowardly, of all others. It was my unhappy lot not only to belong to a religious slaveholder, but to live in a community of such religionists.

Why did Frederick Douglass rarely see his mom? Why does Frederick only rarely see his mother? She was sent to a different plantation after Frederick was about 12 months.

Why were Frederick and his mother separated? Douglass is separated from his mother soon after birth—a common practice among slave owners. Douglass assumes that this custom is intended to break the natural bond of affection between mother and child.
