Unit 20 Engineering: Primary Forming Processes (Edexcel)

Question 1: What is primary forming?

Primary forming involves the conversion of raw materials (e.g., metal ingots, plastic pellets) into semi-finished or finished products through various processes that physically alter their shape and structure.

Question 2: Describe the major primary forming processes.

- Casting: Molten metal or plastic is poured into a mold to solidify and take the shape of the mold.
- Forging: Metal is heated and shaped through mechanical force (e.g., hammering, pressing).
- Rolling: Metal or plastic is passed through rollers to reduce its thickness and increase its length.
- Extrusion: Metal or plastic is forced through a die to create a specific profile or shape.
- Drawing: Metal is pulled through a die to reduce its cross-sectional area and increase its length.

Question 3: What are the advantages of casting?

- Ability to create complex shapes
- Relatively low production costs

- Suitable for a wide range of materials (e.g., metals, plastics, composites)

Question 4: What are the limitations of forging?

- Restricted to producing relatively small and simple shapes
- High tooling costs
- Susceptible to material defects (e.g., porosity)

Question 5: How does rolling differ from extrusion?

- Rolling reduces the thickness of material, while extrusion creates a specific shape or profile.
- Rolling is a continuous process, while extrusion is a semi-continuous process.
- Rolling requires less force than extrusion, but it is limited in the shapes it can produce.
