What does FHA look for in an appraisal? FHA appraisal and inspection checklist Must have an undamaged exterior, foundation and roof. Must have safe and reasonable property access. Must not contain loose wiring and exposed electrical systems.

What is an FHA checklist? An FHA home inspection checklist is used by HUD-approved property appraisers to thoroughly inspect the entire property. It is used to assess the exterior and interior structure of the house, electrical, plumbing, and ventilation systems if in good condition and comply with regulatory standards.

What things will fail an FHA inspection? The overall structure of the property must be in good enough condition to keep its occupants safe. This means severe structural damage, leakage, dampness, decay or termite damage can cause the property to fail inspection. In such a case, repairs must be made in order for the FHA loan to move forward.

Is it hard to pass an FHA appraisal? FHA lenders cannot lend more than the home is worth, so if the appraisal comes in below the sale price, you'll need to negotiate the price with your lender or walk away from the sale. How tough are FHA appraisals? The FHA has strict requirements for the properties it backs, but most homes pass appraisal just fine.

What are the red flags for FHA appraisals? Major structural issues that are common FHA red flags include cracked or crumbling foundations, deteriorating roofs, and water damage. Other red flags that appraisers look for include: Missing handrails. Cracked windows.

How picky are FHA inspections? What won't pass an FHA inspection? The FHA is most concerned with issues that affect the safety and livability of the property. If anything major happens that could affect the safety or health of an occupant, the appraisal is failed, and the issues need to be rectified before the mortgage can close.

What would disqualify a home from FHA financing? The FHA says that examples of such problems include but are not limited to the following: Missing handrails. Cracked or damaged exit doors that are otherwise operable. Cracked window glass.

How long after an FHA appraisal is closing? The length of time from an appraisal to closing can vary. While mortgage timelines can differ based on individual situations, some lenders estimate that this period typically takes about 30 to 45 days. If the process takes longer than that, the mortgage lender may still accept the appraisal for some time.

How often do FHA appraisals come in low? While how often home appraisals come in low can depend on market conditions, research by Fannie Mae shows that in a balanced market, around 8% of appraisals come in below the contract price.

Why would a home not pass FHA? The FHA's three requirements are that a property must be safe, secure, and structurally sound to qualify for one of their loans. Properties cannot have adverse conditions that might imperil the homeowner, and must meet proper building codes. As a buyer, these standards protect you from buying an unsafe property.

What will deny an FHA loan? Despite the lenient FHA loan requirements, it is possible to be denied. The three primary factors that can disqualify you from getting an FHA loan are a high debt-to-income ratio, poor credit, or lack of funds to cover the required down payment, monthly mortgage payments or closing costs.

Are FHA inspections more strict than conventional? An FHA appraisal can require repairs before the loan is approved. That's more strict than a conventional loan. An appraisal isn't a home inspection. It's still a good idea to get a home inspection for your own benefit.

What is the timeline for the FHA inspection? FHA Appraisal Timeline The appraiser will spend anywhere from 45 minutes to several hours evaluating a home. Once the appraisal has taken place, the report is usually complete within 7 to 10 business days. The appraisal process involves: Scheduling the appraisal appointment.

Sugar Nation: The Hidden Truth Behind America's Deadliest Habit

Sugar, a ubiquitous ingredient in our modern diet, has become a silent killer, wreaking havoc on the health of millions of Americans. In his groundbreaking book, "Sugar Nation," author Jeff O'Connell uncovers the shocking truth behind our sugar addiction and offers a revolutionary solution to beat it.

Q: Why is sugar so harmful? A: Sugar, particularly added sugar, contributes to a wide range of chronic diseases, including obesity, heart disease, type 2 diabetes, and cancer. It spikes blood sugar levels, leading to insulin resistance and inflammation. Additionally, sugar provides empty calories and little nutritional value.

Q: How can I break my sugar addiction? A: O'Connell advocates for a gradual approach to reducing sugar intake. Start by cutting out sugary drinks and processed foods, which are major sources of added sugar. Gradually reduce the amount of sugar in other foods and drinks. Replace sugary snacks with whole, unprocessed foods, such as fruits, vegetables, and nuts.

Q: How much sugar should I consume? A: The American Heart Association recommends limiting added sugar intake to 6 teaspoons (25 grams) per day for women and 9 teaspoons (36 grams) per day for men. However, O'Connell argues that even this amount is too high and recommends aiming for no more than 3-5 teaspoons of added sugar per day.

Q: What are the benefits of reducing sugar intake? A: Reducing sugar intake can have numerous health benefits, including weight loss, improved blood sugar control, reduced inflammation, and a decreased risk of chronic diseases. It can also boost energy levels and overall well-being.

Q: Is it difficult to follow a low-sugar lifestyle? A: O'Connell emphasizes that beating sugar addiction is a journey, not a destination. There will be challenges, but by following the gradual approach outlined in his book, anyone can overcome their sugar cravings and reap the benefits of a healthier, sugar-free life.
