Why is the band called Motörhead? Realizing that this would preclude them from commercial acceptance, he eventually settled on Motörhead, after a song he had written for Hawkwind. His stated aim was for the outfit to be “the dirtiest rock n' roll band in the world”. The name Motörhead was derived from a slang term for an amphetamine user.

Who was the best Motörhead guitarist? As the lead guitarist of Motörhead from 1984 until the band's end in 2015, Phil Campbell has been one of the most influential guitar players in all of Hard Rock and Heavy Metal. Lemmy's son Paul Inder is believed to be the beneficiary of his estate, which includes any royalties earned after his death. It is believed that Lemmy also had another son who was adopted.

Why did Phil Taylor leave Motörhead? He said "I always regretted leaving. Let's just say I took a three-year holiday." He continued playing in the group until 1992. While little is published about his mental health throughout his life, towards the end, he lived with depression.

What kind of car did Lemmy drive? Allegedly owned by Lemmy Kilmister of Motörhead, this Packard-Bentley is known as "Mavis," and it's suitably antisocial to be owned by that distinguished gentleman. However, it is Chris Williams who should get credit for the construction of Mavis.
