What is primary key and foreign key in hospital management system? R-ID (Primary Key): Unique identifier for each Room. P-ID (Foreign Key referencing Patient): P-ID is a foreign key in a table that references the Patient table, typically used to establish a relationship between the two tables based on the Patient ID.

What is the difference between PK and FK? The primary Key is a key that helps in uniquely identifying the tuple of the database whereas the Foreign Key is a key that is used to identify the relationship between the tables through the primary key of one table that is the primary key one table acts as a foreign key to another table.

What is the difference between primary key and foreign key and unique key? Primary key: Defines a unique identifier for each row in a table. Unique key: Enforces uniqueness but does not necessarily define a unique identifier. Foreign key: Establishes a relationship between two tables.

What is the difference between primary key and foreign key in ER diagram? The primary key doesn't allow null values. The foreign key accepts multiple null values. It can identify the record uniquely in the database table. A foreign key is a field in the table that is the primary key in another table.

What are foreign keys in ER models? Foreign keys are used to establish a relationship when both tables have the same attribute [5]. A secondary key is used strictly for retrieval purposes and accessing records [5]. These keys do not have to be unique and are typically not included in an E-R diagram.

Why primary and foreign keys are an important part of database management? Primary keys enforce uniqueness within their table, ensuring each record is identifiable. Foreign keys, however, are used to establish and navigate relationships between tables. In a library database, a Books table may have BookID as its primary key, uniquely identifying each book.

What is foreign key in database management system? A foreign key is a field in one table that references the primary key to another table. An example would be an Orders table containing OrderID, CustomerID, and ProductID fields. The CustomerID field is a foreign key of the Customers table, which contains customer information, such as name and address.
