Solubility Product Constant Lab 17A Answers

1. What is the solubility product constant?

The solubility product constant ( $K_{sp}$ ) is a constant for a given solute that represents the product of the molar concentrations of the constituent ions in a saturated solution at a given temperature.

2. What is the purpose of this experiment?

The purpose of this experiment is to determine the  $K_{sp}$  of a sparingly soluble salt by measuring its solubility.

3. What is the procedure for this experiment?

In this lab, a known mass of the sparingly soluble salt is dissolved in water and the resulting solution is analyzed to determine the concentration of the constituent ions. The K<sub>sp</sub> value is then calculated using the measured concentrations.

4. What are the results of this experiment?

The results of this experiment will vary depending on the salt being studied and the temperature at which the experiment is conducted. However, the measured K<sub>sp</sub> value should be consistent with literature values for the salt being studied.

5. What are the conclusions of this experiment?

The conclusions of this experiment will be that the K<sub>sp</sub> of the sparingly soluble salt has been determined and the value is consistent with literature values. Additionally, the experiment will provide a deeper understanding of the concept of solubility product and its significance in chemistry.
