What do female serial killers have in common? Researchers have identified certain characteristics of female serial killers, finding they tend to be white, married at least once, of at least average intelligence, and are more likely to be employed in healthcare professions.

Who is the most sadistic woman in history? 1. Elizabeth Bathory. The Guinness World Records considers Countess Elizabeth Bathory to be the most prolific female serial killer. She was accused of torturing, mutilating and killing around 650 women between 1585 and 1610.

What female serial killer killed children? Marie Noe is an American woman convicted in 1999 of murdering eight of her children between 1949 and 1968. Waneta Hoyt was an American serial killer who was convicted of killing all five of her children between 1965 and 1971.

Who was the nastiest serial killer?

How do female serial killers choose their victims? These researchers have uncovered that male serial murderers mostly “hunt” their victims; these victims are almost always strangers that can lead back to the original target they couldn't bring themselves to harm. Female killers, however, often “gather” their victims, who mostly tend to be people they already know.

What is the psychology of female killers? Unlike male serial killers who usually target unknown victims, females tend to kill men who are emotionally and physically closest to them—particularly husbands or lovers—and they generally kill to improve their lifestyle. However, victims of female serial killers are not confined to male husbands or lovers.

What profession are most female serial killers? Nearly half of female serial killers are nurses or professionals working in healthcare, according to new research from author Dr Marissa A. Harrison.
