What is the concept of Afrocentricity? Afrocentricity is an intellectual paradigm that privileges the centrality of Africans within the context of their own historical experiences. Among the key concepts are agency, location, place, centeredness, and subject.

What are the three aspects of the Afrocentric paradigm? In The Afrocentric Paradigm (2003), Mazama notes that there are three aspects to the Afrocentric paradigm: 1) affective, cognitive, conative; 2) structural; and 3) functional.

Who is the father of Afrocentricity? He is the founder of the theory of Afrocentricity and the think-tank, The Molefi Kete Asante Institute for Afrocentric Studies in Philadelphia. Asante was born in Valdosta, Georgia, of Sudanese (Nubian) and Nigerian (Yoruba) DNA heritage. He is one of sixteen children.

What are the principles of Afrocentricity? Afrocentrism argues that for centuries Africans and other nonwhites have been dominated, through slavery and colonization, by Europeans, and that European culture is at best irrelevant—and at worst diametrically opposed—to efforts by non-Europeans to achieve self-determination.

What are the assumptions of Afrocentric theory? Afrocentricity proposes under frameworks of racial hatred and superiority, the practice of denigrating groups of people based on shade of complexion and other phenotypical characteristics has been used historically to exclude groups from participations in society (Asante, 2003; Schiele, 1996; King, 1997).

What is Afrocentric view of social development? In this regard, the Afrocentric paradigm asserts that a society with abundant material and technological opulence, but with inadequate collective compassion, cannot be considered an advanced civilization (Akbar, 1984). Within the Afrocentric framework, poverty is intolerable.

What is the importance of Afrocentric? The Afrocentric perspective Afrocentricity emphasizes the importance of cultural context and recognizes the values and historical experiences of people of African descent. It acknowledges that these experiences shape Black communities' unique health needs and concerns.

What are the critiques of Afrocentricity? While some see this movement as rejecting Western religion and embracing traditional African beliefs, others view it as an inadequate response to underlying systems of oppression. Afrocentrists argue that black people can only be free from oppression by returning to Africa, both culturally and spiritually.

What does Afrocentric do? The AfroCentric Group is a majority black-owned, JSE-listed investment holding company providing services and products to the healthcare sector. The Group was founded in 2008 on the core philosophy of promoting transformation and empowerment.
