The Muscular System: Anatomy and Physiology Coloring Workbook Answers

1. What is the main difference between the skeletal and muscular systems?

Answer: The skeletal system provides support and protection for the body, while the muscular system allows for movement.

2. What are the three main types of muscles?

Answer: Skeletal muscles (attached to bones), smooth muscles (found in the walls of organs), and cardiac muscles (found in the heart).

3. What is the function of a muscle fiber?

Answer: To shorten and contract, which generates force and movement.

4. Describe the process of muscle contraction.

Answer: Electrical impulses trigger the release of calcium ions, which bind to troponin and allow myosin heads to bind to actin filaments. Myosin heads then pull the actin filaments, causing the muscle to shorten.

5. What is the difference between isometric and isotonic contractions?

Answer: In isometric contractions, the muscle generates force but does not change length (e.g., holding a heavy object). In isotonic contractions, the muscle shortens while generating force (e.g., lifting a weight).

Total Knee Arthroplasty Protocol: Brigham and Women's

1. What is the Total Knee Arthroplasty (TKA) Protocol at Brigham and Women's? The TKA protocol at Brigham and Women's Hospital provides patients with a comprehensive guide to prepare for and recover from total knee arthroplasty surgery. It includes pre-operative education, post-operative pain management, physical therapy, and follow-up care.

2. What happens before surgery? Before surgery, patients will undergo a pre-operative evaluation to assess their overall health and determine their suitability for TKA. They will also receive detailed instructions on how to prepare for surgery, including fasting and taking certain medications.

3. What is the surgical procedure like? TKA surgery involves removing the damaged portions of the knee joint and replacing them with artificial implants. The surgery is performed under general anesthesia and usually takes several hours.

4. What is the post-operative recovery protocol? After surgery, patients will typically stay in the hospital for 2-3 days. They will be given pain medication and anti-inflammatory drugs to manage discomfort. Physical therapy will begin immediately to help patients regain range of motion and strength in their knee.

5. What is the long-term follow-up care? Patients will follow up with their surgeon regularly after surgery to ensure proper healing and progress. They will continue with physical therapy as prescribed and may need to take medications for pain management. The long-term goal is to restore full function and mobility to the knee.
