Solution-Focused Family Therapy Assessment

What is solution-focused family therapy assessment?

Solution-focused family therapy (SFT) assessment aims to identify and build upon the strengths and resources within a family system to facilitate positive change. It focuses on the present and future, rather than dwelling on the past, and seeks to engage all family members in a collaborative process.

What are the key principles of SFFT assessment?

- 1. Focus on Strengths and Resources: SFFT assessment emphasizes the family's strengths, resiliencies, and positive interactions. It examines what is working well within the family and how those strengths can be utilized to address challenges.
- 2. Explore Desired Outcomes: The therapist works with the family to determine their goals and desired outcomes for therapy. This helps to create a clear direction for the therapy process.
- 3. Create Exceptions: SFFT seeks to identify "exceptions" to the problem behavior or issue. These are times when the problem occurs less frequently or not at all, which suggests that the family possesses resources to address the issue.
- 4. Explore Miracle Question: The "miracle question" asks the family to imagine what their life would be like if the problem magically disappeared overnight. This helps to clarify the family's hopes and aspirations and identify potential solutions.

What questions are typically asked in an SFFT assessment?

1. What are your family's strengths? 2. What are the good things that happen in your family? 3. What has been working well for you lately? 4. What are your hopes and goals for therapy? 5. Imagine that a miracle occurred and this problem disappeared overnight. What would your life be like?

How does SFFT assessment differ from traditional family therapy assessment?

SFFT assessment focuses on identifying strengths and exceptions, while traditional family therapy assessment may focus more on identifying problems and deficits. SFFT also places a greater emphasis on collaboration with the family and actively engaging all members in the assessment process.

What are the benefits of SFFT assessment?

SFFT assessment can help families:

- Identify their strengths and resources
- Clarify their goals and desired outcomes
- Develop a positive and collaborative relationship with the therapist
- Take ownership of their problems and solutions
