Timing is Everything: A Conversation with Mary Calmes

Introduction

Timing is a crucial aspect of any project, and in the world of writing, it can make all the difference between a successful manuscript and one that languishes in the slush pile. From pacing to submissions, timing is key. In this exclusive interview, award-winning author Mary Calmes shares her insights on the importance of timing in writing.

Question 1: How does timing impact the pacing of your writing?

Mary Calmes: Timing is essential for pacing. By varying the length of scenes and chapters, I can create a sense of urgency or suspense. Faster pacing keeps readers engaged, while slower pacing allows for deeper exploration of characters and themes. It's all about finding the right balance for the story.

Question 2: When is the best time to submit your manuscript?

Avoid submitting during peak periods, when your manuscript may have difficulty standing out. Consider submitting during off-seasons or when specific genres are in high demand.

Question 3: How can writers anticipate changes in the publishing landscape?

Mary Calmes: Timing is important in staying ahead of industry trends. Attend conferences, read industry publications, and network with other writers to gain insights into emerging themes and reader preferences. By anticipating changes, you can adjust your writing to remain relevant.

Question 4: What advice do you have for writers struggling with timing?

Mary Calmes: Break down the writing process into smaller tasks. Set realistic deadlines and stick to them. Seek feedback from critique partners or beta readers to identify pacing or submission timing issues. Remember that timing is an art that takes practice and patience.

Conclusion

Timing is a powerful tool in the hands of writers. By carefully considering the pace of their writing, the timing of their submissions, and the evolving publishing landscape, writers can increase their chances of success. As Mary Calmes reminds us, "Timing is everything. It's the difference between a manuscript that sings and one that stumbles."
