Question 1: What is a turnkey contract under the FIDIC Silver Book?

Answer: A turnkey contract is a comprehensive agreement in which the contractor is responsible for the design, construction, and commissioning of a project, handing over the completed facility to the client "ready to use." Under the FIDIC Silver Book, the turnkey contract is a fixed-price lump-sum agreement, where the contractor assumes the design risk.

Question 2: Who is responsible for the design in a turnkey contract?

Answer: In a turnkey contract under the FIDIC Silver Book, the contractor is responsible for the design of the project. The client can provide input and requirements, but the contractor ultimately bears the risk of the design's adequacy and functionality.

Question 3: What are the advantages of a turnkey contract for the client?

Answer: Turnkey contracts offer several advantages for clients:

- Simplified procurement: By engaging a single contractor, clients can reduce the complexity and time involved in finding and managing multiple contractors.
- Fixed cost: The lump-sum contract price provides budget certainty to the client.
- Single point of contact: Clients have only one contractor to deal with, streamlining communication and decision-making.
- Reduced risk: The contractor assumes the design and construction risks, providing peace of mind for the client.

- Limited client involvement: The client may have limited involvement in the design and construction process, which can be a concern for clients with specific or complex requirements.
- Fixed price: The fixed-price nature of the contract can put pressure on contractors to control costs and meet deadlines, potentially affecting quality.

Question 5: When is a turnkey contract appropriate?

Answer: Turnkey contracts are suitable for projects where:

- The client requires a high level of certainty in terms of cost and delivery.
- The project is complex and requires specialized design expertise.
- The client has limited time or resources to manage multiple contractors.
- The client values simplicity and a single point of contact.
