How do I send a pitch deck to investors?

What is investor pitching? What is an investor pitch? An investor pitch is your startup's ticket to securing the funding it needs to thrive. It's a carefully crafted presentation that highlights your business idea, the value it brings to the market, and why investors should believe in your vision.

How do you pitch your idea to investors?

How to pitch to VC?

How much does an investor pitch deck cost? On average, businesses spend between $2,000 – $4,000 for a starter investor pitch deck or sales presentation. Complex pitch decks with 50+ slides can be higher. Elements that impact the cost include: Strategy: Business planning, brand strategy, storyboards, legal, financial, and industry expertise.

What is the difference between a pitch deck and an investor deck? A pitch deck should attract you, and an investor deck should reassure you. A pitch deck deals more in memorable sound bites, while an investor deck provides details that are key to decision-making.

How long should an investor pitch be? Don't make the pitch deck more than 15-20 slides long (investors have limited attention spans). If you feel you need to add more information, include it as an appendix. Don't have too many wordy slides. Don't provide excessive financial details, as that can be provided in a follow-up.

How to nail an investor pitch?

How do you ask for money in an investor pitch? Talk about the problems your company solves in the marketplace. Provide a detailed picture of your revenue model and how your business will make money. Show them a demo! You should also show evidence of your growth potential and any expected milestones.

What is it called when you pitch to investors? Elevator pitch A good way to envision this, is if you bumped into a potential investor randomly, and they asked you what exactly does your startup do? Do you need a business plan if you have a pitch deck? To summarise, all businesses should do a business plan and keep them regularly updated whether they want to raise finance or not. Any company that wishes to raise finance must also produce a first class pitch deck.

Should I send my pitch deck to investors? Typically, you will need the deck to walk investors through your business during the second and the third meeting. You will need to send the deck to the firm before the partner meeting. It is a standard ask. All partners are given your deck in advance of the partner meeting so that they can review it in advance.

Does a pitch deck get investors attention? The pitch deck is often what gets investors excited - it's their first understanding of the startup. Investors expect to see a pitch deck that tells them what they need to know, and quickly. In many cases, a strong deck is the difference between getting that all-important meeting - or not.

What is killer pitch? A killer pitch wins customers and partners by defining a company's value-add, showing proof of concept, and clearly describing how it outshines the competition.

What do you wear to an investor pitch? Don't over dress and don't be too casual. Oh, and if you wear a Rolex, make sure you leave it at home. You don't want your investors thinking you don't need their money. If you're coming from the corporate world or have seen some executive-level key note speeches, business professional attire is usually the norm.

How to make a killer pitch?

How do you end a pitch to an investor? Towards the end of your pitch, tell investors that “this is just the beginning” for your startup. At this point, you should outline your vision for how the industry is going to change in the next few years and how your startup will lead or take advantage of that change.

When should you start pitching to investors? Traction is incredibly important to investors. They want to see that you can focus, can execute, and can build a real business. You also need to prove that you can grow fast enough to deliver on their expected returns. When you can demonstrate great traction, that's the right time to pitch to investors.
