A hydraulic system operating in a cold climate, however, would operate better with a lower viscosity oil like AW-32 because the thinner oil will be less resistant to flow on start-up.

Does it matter what hydraulic oil you use? It doesn't matter how good the other properties of the oil are if the viscosity grade is not matched to the operating temperature range of the hydraulic system where it will be used. If you choose a viscosity grade incorrectly, your hydraulic components will degrade faster than they should.
