

EJB 3 IN ACTION SECOND EDITION

Download Complete File

What is the difference between EJB 2 and 3? The EJB 3.0 entity bean class is a nonabstract POJO class with implementations for the getter/setter methods, in comparison to the EJB 2.0 entity bean class, which is abstract with abstract getter/setter methods. EJB 3.0 does not require component and home interfaces.

What is EJB 3? An EJB 3.0 session bean is a POJO managed by the EJB container. The functionality of a session bean is defined by its service interface (a.k.a. business interface), which is a plain old Java interface. Using the interface class name, the session bean client retrieves a stub object of the bean from the server's JNDI.

Why EJB is not used anymore? The main cause that Pojo Programming model(Spring) took over the Ejb model : Heavy-Weight- The Applications developed under EJB framework were heavy-weight because it uses the libraries of the Application server + JDK. EJB container is a part of application server like JBoss and it is not a lighter Web-Container.

What replaced EJB? As a lightweight container, Spring is often considered an EJB replacement.

When was EJB 3.0 released? EJB 3.0, final release (2006-05-11) The use of home and remote interfaces and the ejb-jar.

Is EJB deprecated? On the other hand, due to the large amount of existing code that uses EJB beans, the technology is also not expected to be removed from Jakarta EE anytime soon. A possible future direction for EJB is to rebase it on CDI.

What is the ejb3 specification? The EJB 3.0 specification represents simplification and streamlining of the business logic and persistence programming models used in Java EE. The ultimate source of information is the specification, which is available on the Oracle website.

What is EJB2? An entity bean is an EJB 2.1 enterprise bean component that manages persistent data, performs complex business logic, potentially uses several dependent Java objects, and can be uniquely identified by a primary key.

What are the different types of EJB? There are three types of EJBs: session beans, entity beans, and message-driven beans.

What is the difference between Web 1 2 and 3? Web 3.0, which is also referred to as Web3, is built on a foundation consisting of the core ideas of decentralization, openness, and more excellent user utility. Web 1.0 is the "read-only Web," Web 2.0 is the "participative social Web," and Web 3.0 is the "read, write, execute Web."

What are the versions of EJB? Specification. The EJB specification was originally developed in 1997 by IBM and later adopted by Sun Microsystems (EJB 1.0 and 1.1) in 1999 and enhanced under the Java Community Process as JSR 19 (EJB 2.0), JSR 153 (EJB 2.1), JSR 220 (EJB 3.0), JSR 318 (EJB 3.1) and JSR 345 (EJB 3.2).
