Time Value of Money: Problems and Solutions by Prasanna Chandra

Paragraph 1:

The time value of money (TVM) is a fundamental concept in finance that accounts for the different value of money at different points in time. This is due to the fact that money in the present can be invested to earn interest, which increases its value over time. Conversely, money in the future is less valuable because its purchasing power decreases due to inflation.

Paragraph 2:

One of the key problems with TVM is calculating the present value (PV) of a future amount of money. The PV is the value of the future amount today, taking into account the interest rate and the time period. This is important for budgeting and investment planning.

Paragraph 3:

Another issue is calculating the future value (FV) of a present amount of money. The FV is the value of the present amount at a specified future date, including interest earned. This is useful for determining the potential return on an investment.

Paragraph 4:

Prasanna Chandra, a renowned finance expert, has developed several solutions to help individuals understand and apply TVM. One solution is the compound interest formula, which calculates the FV of an investment over a specified time period, taking into account interest compounding.

Paragraph 5:

Another solution is the annuity formula, which calculates the PV or FV of a series of equal payments made at regular intervals. This is useful for planning regular savings or loan payments. By understanding TVM and using Prasanna Chandra's solutions, individuals can make informed financial decisions and achieve their financial goals.
