How to Install, Configure, and Manage AD FS: A Step-by-Step Guide

What is AD FS and How Does It Work?

Active Directory Federation Services (AD FS) is a single sign-on (SSO) solution that allows users to access multiple applications and resources using a single set of credentials. It acts as a bridge between on-premises and cloud-based applications, enabling seamless authentication and authorization across different domains.

Step-by-Step Installation of AD FS

1. Install the AD FS Server role on a Windows Server machine.
2. Create a Service Account and grant it necessary permissions.
3. Run the AD FS Configuration Wizard to configure the federation service.
4. Create a Relying Party Trust to define the applications and resources that AD FS will authenticate for.

Registering Applications with AD FS

1. Create a new Relying Party Trust in AD FS.
2. Configure the application's metadata URL and identifier.
3. Specify the claims that will be sent to the application.

Setting Up SSO with AD FS

1. Enable SSO in the Relying Party Trust.
2. Configure the application to use AD FS as the identity provider.

3. Test the SSO functionality by signing in to the application.

Integrating Applications with AD FS

1. Determine the supported authentication protocols for the application.
2. Create a Claims Rule in AD FS to map claims from Active Directory to the application's claims format.
3. Configure the application to accept claims from AD FS.

Additional Considerations

- AD Federation Workflow: AD FS uses a series of authentication protocols, including SAML, WS-Federation, and OpenID Connect, to establish trust and authenticate users.
- Checking AD FS Setup: Verify the federation service name, relying party trusts, and claims rules in the AD FS console.
- IIS Requirement: IIS is not required for AD FS, but it may be needed if the server is hosting other applications or services.
- Domain Controller Installation: AD FS should not be installed on a domain controller.
- AD FS as an Application: Yes, AD FS is a server application that provides SSO services.

Advanced Topics

- Installing AD FS via PowerShell: Use the `Install-AdfsForest` and `Configure-AdfsFarm` cmdlets to automate the installation.
- Federation Service Name: The federation service name is the URL endpoint that applications use to initiate the authentication process.
- ADFS vs Azure AD: ADFS is an on-premises SSO solution, while Azure AD is a cloud-based identity and access management platform.
- SSO Activation: Enable SSO in the Relying Party Trust and configure the application to use AD FS as an identity provider.
- IDP Configuration: Configure the Identify Provider (IDP) in AD FS to define the authentication methods and claims that will be sent to Relying Parties.

- ADFS Claim and Token: Claims are statements about a user's identity, while tokens are secure containers that bundle claims and are used to authenticate users to applications.
- Active Directory Replication: Active Directory replication ensures that changes made to one domain controller are replicated to all other domain controllers in the forest.
- Active Directory Based Activation: This feature uses claims-based authentication to activate Windows computers in a domain environment.
- ADFS vs SSO: SSO allows users to access multiple applications with a single login, while ADFS is a specific technology that implements SSO.
- ADFS vs LDAP: LDAP is a protocol for accessing data in Active Directory, while ADFS is an SSO solution that uses LDAP for authentication.

Troubleshooting

- Check event logs for errors related to AD FS.
- Verify that the AD FS services are running properly.
- Ensure that the firewall is allowing traffic on the required ports (e.g., 443 for HTTPS).
- Contact Microsoft support for additional assistance.
