Question 1:

Explain how a transformer converts AC electrical energy from one voltage level to another.

Answer:

A transformer is an electrical device that transfers energy between two or more circuits through electromagnetic induction. It works by using two coils of wire wrapped around a laminated iron core. When an alternating current (AC) is passed through the primary coil, it creates a changing magnetic field. This changing magnetic field induces an AC current in the secondary coil. The ratio of the number of turns on the primary coil to the number of turns on the secondary coil determines the voltage ratio of the transformer.

Question 2:

Describe the principle of superposition as applied to waves.

Answer:

The principle of superposition states that when two or more waves interact, the resultant wave is the sum of the individual waves. This principle applies to all types of waves, including water waves, sound waves, and electromagnetic waves. The superposition of waves can result in constructive interference, where the amplitudes of the waves add together, or destructive interference, where the amplitudes of the waves cancel each other out.

Question 3:

b) Average velocity = (Displacement / Total time) = [(50 km north) + (30 km east)] / (1 hour + 30 minutes) = 40 km/h in the northeast direction

Question 4:
