WHAT MADE THE FOUNDERS

DIFFERENT GORDON S WOOD

Download Complete File

What did Gordon Wood believe about the origins of the American Revolution?

He knew what the Revolution was about and what it implied, not just for Americans, but for all humanity. The United States was a new republican nation in a land of monarchies, a grand experiment in self-government, conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal.

What are revolutionary characters about? Wood communicates the huge odds the revolutionary generation were up against in taking on the imperial power of Britain, and he also conveys the tumultuous, highly partisan mood of the 1790's, as the Federalists (led by Hamilton and Washington) clashed with the Republicans (led by Jefferson and Madison), and the legacy ...

What is one major difference between Gordon Reed's and Breen's interpretations of the American Revolution? Gordon-Reed argues that the Revolution did not live up to its perceived goals for African Americans, whereas Breen argues that the Revolution resulted in significant social change.

Why does Wood argue the American Revolution was radical? Wood argues that the American Revolution was radical in the way of social change and in the transformation of relationships that bound people to each other. Relationships are a key factor in many social upheavals, and Wood insists that this Revolution is no different, and certainly not lesser.

Who was the biggest hero of the Revolutionary War? General George Washington led the American army to victory during the Revolutionary War. Despite having little practical experience in managing large, conventional armies, Washington proved to be a capable and resilient leader of the American military forces during the Revolutionary War.

Who was the main character in the American Revolution? George Washington served as the Commander in the Continental Army in the fight against Britain. The Continental Army had many disadvantages and difficulties during the war. His leadership inspired soldiers to keep fighting despite many defeats and setbacks.

What is the character of a revolutionary? In politics, a revolutionary is someone who supports abrupt, rapid, and drastic change, usually replacing the status quo, while a reformist is someone who supports more gradual and incremental change, often working within the system.

What was the difference between Wood and Zinn? These two historians viewed the nature of American Revolution from two opposite different perspectives. Zinn viewed the American Revolution as an effort to preserve America's status; while Wood looked at Revolution as an event that incorporated sense of equality among all Americans.

What was the major difference between the revolutionary leaders in America and the revolutionary leaders in France? This conception is clearly different from that of the American revolutionaries. For the Americans, interests were the guiding force; for the French, reason. For the Americans, Freedom was to be preserved against the State; for the French, the State was used by reason to achieve Social Justice.

How were the two sides in the Revolutionary War differ? The two sides of the American Revolution differed primarily in whether they believed the 13 colonies should be an independent nation or not. They also differed on the nature of government. The American colonists who fought in the Revolution were republicans, while the British and loyalists were monarchists.

How did Gordon Woods' analysis of the American Revolution differ from the other scholars mentioned here? Question 4: How did Gordon Wood's analysis of the American Revolution differ from the other scholars mentioned here? Answer: He brought back into vogue the idea that the Revolution was a clash over ideology.

Who were the radicals in the American Revolution? Radical revolutionaries had a strong trust in the people, viewed them as inherently virtuous (see public virtue), and believed that citizens could govern themselves. Samuel Adams, Thomas Jefferson, and Thomas Paine might be described as radical revolutionaries.

What is a revolutionary radical? A radical revolutionary movement will thus want both to take an exclusive control of the state, and to fundamentally transform one or more elements of its society, economy or culture.
