

Anticipating surprise analysis for strategic warning

Download Complete File

What is the difference between strategic surprise and tactical surprise?

Tactical surprise is the failure of tactical warning; it is an unexpected, catastrophic attack by an adversary, the likes of Pearl Harbor or the Al Qaeda attacks on 9/11. Strategic surprise is a systemic failure to prepare for potential adversarial actions.

What is the difference between strategic and tactical warning? Warning is often divided into two main types: tactical and strategic. Tactical warning is defined as warning that an attack is underway--that it has actually begun and is underway now--while strategic warning is warning that an attack is imminent or likely in the reasonably near future.

What is more tactical than strategic? Strategy defines your organization's long-term goals. Through strategic planning, your enterprise can reach those goals. Conversely, tactics are more concrete and oriented toward a shorter time frame and smaller steps. This may include best practices, specific plans, resources, and more.
