Understanding Post-tonal Music with Miguel Roig-Francolí

1. What is post-tonal music?

Post-tonal music refers to music composed after the decline of the traditional tonal system (major and minor scales) that had dominated Western music for centuries. It emerged in the early 20th century and characterized by the rejection of tonal hierarchy and the exploration of new harmonies and melodic structures.

2. Who is Miguel Roig-Francolí?

Miguel Roig-Francolí is a Spanish composer and music theorist specializing in post-tonal music. He has written extensively on the subject, including the influential book "Post-tonal Techniques in 20th Century Composition."

3. What are the key characteristics of post-tonal music?

Post-tonal music often incorporates:

- Atonality (lack of a tonal center)
- Polytonality (the use of multiple tonalities simultaneously)
- Dissonance and dissonance treatment
- Expanded use of chromaticism
- Novel melodic and rhythmic structures

4. What was Roig-Francolí's contribution to post-tonal music?

Roig-Francolí developed a systematic approach to understanding post-tonal music based on set theory. He proposed a conceptual framework to analyze and classify harmony, melodic technique, and formal structures in post-tonal compositions.

5. Why is Roig-Francolí's work important?

Roig-Francolí's research has provided a theoretical foundation for understanding and analyzing post-tonal music. His work has influenced composers, performers, and music scholars around the world, contributing to a deeper appreciation and understanding of this complex and innovative musical style.
