The Origins of Backwardness in Eastern Europe: Economics and Politics from the Middle Ages to the Early Twentieth Century

1. Economic Factors: A Legacy of Serfdom and Agrarian Dominance

Q: How did serfdom shape the economy of Eastern Europe? A: Serfdom, a form of forced labor, constrained rural populations and hindered agricultural productivity. Peasants were tied to the land, limiting their freedom of movement and access to education, which stifled economic growth.

2. Political Factors: Autocratic Rule and Limited Civic Participation

Q: How did autocratic rule impact political development in Eastern Europe? A: Absolute monarchies dominated Eastern Europe, suppressing political dissent and limiting civic participation. This centralization of power hindered the rise of representative institutions and prevented the development of a strong middle class.

3. Geographical Challenges: Isolation and Lack of Sea Access

Q: How did geographical isolation contribute to Eastern Europe's backwardness? A: Many Eastern European countries were landlocked or had limited access to major trade routes. This hindered economic exchange and cultural diffusion, isolating them from Western Europe's economic advancements.

4. Cultural Factors: Orthodox Christianity and the Lack of Renaissance and Reformation

Q: How did Orthodox Christianity influence Eastern European society? A: The dominance of Orthodox Christianity emphasized spiritual values over secular pursuits, hindering the development of rationalism and scientific thought. Additionally, the absence of a Renaissance and Reformation in Eastern Europe limited the spread of humanistic ideas and technological innovations.

5. The Legacy of Ottoman Domination

Q: How did Ottoman rule affect the development of Eastern Europe? A: The Ottoman Empire controlled large parts of Eastern Europe for centuries, imposing a feudal system and limiting economic opportunities. Ottoman rule hindered the region's integration into the Western European economy and political system, contributing to its relative backwardness.

How did industrialization help start Japan on an imperialist course? How did industrialization help start Japan on an imperialist course? Industrialization helped Japan grow and develop with the need to make industrial products. From expanding, this gave them access to the products, which led to Japan trying to build an empire.

What was the new writing that Japan adopted and any changes the Japanese made to this style of writing? Japan adopted a writing system known as kanji from China. Kanji are characters borrowed from Chinese characters, each representing a word or concept. Over time, the Japanese made changes to this writing style by developing two additional scripts to complement kanji: hiragana and katakana.

What caused the industrialization and modernization of Japan? In reaction to the West's great advancements, Japan's industrialization began in 1870, during the Meiji Restoration. Government leaders called for the improvement of roads, construction of railroads, and further improvements to modernize Japan.

What caused Japan to become imperialist? Japan's need for China's natural resources, in order to speed the process of industrialization and modernization. The popularity of ideologies such as racial superiority and militarism in Japan. Japan's previous history and ideology of expansion into China and other parts of Asia.

What helped Japan modernize? After the Meiji Restoration (1868), Japan began to modernize and to industrialize on the European and American pattern. Western cultural traits were introduced on a large scale through the schools and the mass communication media.

What caused Japan to change? The postwar constitution changed the way the Japanese were governed and also spurred social change. Some of the biggest changes include the role of the emperor, the role of the military and use of military power, and women's rights.

What did the Japanese do to their writing that made it much easier? Phonological spellings with a limited number of symbols were much easier to use. Computers and the increase of access to information also brought in many new loan words that had no established kanji and were written phonologically. Today Japanese writing is still a mix of Chinese kanji, katakana, and hiragana.

How did industrialization lead to imperialism in Japan? This power, continual success, improvement in economy, and rise of the standards of living encouraged a strong nationalism in the people. Due to the newly gained nationalism and industrialized military, Japan became an imperializer to the weaker, less industrialized countries near the island, like Korea and China.

Why was industrialization so important to the Japanese? Prompted by the need to improve the defences of the nation and particularly its sea-going defences in response to foreign threats, industrialisation was developed by local clans through second hand knowledge, based mostly on Western textbooks, and copying Western examples, combined with traditional craft skills.

What was the impact of industrialization on imperialism? Because the Industrial Revolution increased the production capacity of Western states astronomically, there was an enormous hunger for raw materials to satisfy demands. Thus, the Western powers sought colonies where raw materials were abundant and where they could be appropriated at little to no cost.

What led Japan to become an advancing civilization? Answer. Answer: The circumstances that led Japan to become an "advancing civilization" is its Victory over Russia.
