Its sole purpose is to replace a paper notepad. You can use it to make handwritten notes, edit PDFs, sketch ideas, and read ebooks and articles on its E Ink display.

What age is Asperger's syndrome diagnosed? They may have a hard time forming relationships with other people. Problems are usually obvious by the age of 3, but children are often not diagnosed with Asperger syndrome until they are 7 years old.

Can someone with Asperger's live on their own? Though some may need assistance, many adults live with Asperger's syndrome independently.

What is Asperger's in 12 year old girls? Children with Asperger's Syndrome may exhibit poor social interactions, unusual speech patterns, and limited facial expressions. They might have unique mannerisms, obsessive routines or interests, and sensitivity to sensory stimuli.

Can people with Asperger's have kids? Autism does not affect one's ability to conceive or carry a child. However, there are some unique challenges that autistic individuals may face when it comes to parenting. One of the biggest challenges that autistic parents may face is the social and emotional demands of parenting.

Which parent carries Asperger's gene? Although the exact cause of autism is still unknown, there is evidence to suggest that genetics play a significant role. Since autism is less prevalent in females, autism was always thought to be passed down from the mother. However, research suggests that autism genes are usually inherited from the father.

What are the 12 signs of Asperger's?

Can people with Aspergers truly love? But love is an emotion that can be fully experienced by nearly anyone, despite differences in perception, social interaction patterns, or emotional expression. In other words, someone with Asperger's is capable of falling in love.

How long do people with autism Aspergers live? During a 20-year study, the National Library of Medicine determined that chronic conditions, like cancer, accidents, and health complications from medicine side effects heavily contributed to these younger deaths. According to a different study, the average autism life expectancy was around 54 years old.

Do people with Aspergers get attached to people? Children (and adults) with autism do form attachments with those close to them. The problem is that they seem to do this in a unique way and at what appears to be a very superficial level.

How to discipline a child with Asperger that won't listen? It's important to remember that discipline should always be done in a loving and supportive manner. Children with autism may have difficulty understanding social cues and may become overwhelmed by intense emotions, so it's important to approach discipline with patience and empathy.

What is masking with autism? Masking is a strategy used by some autistic people, consciously or unconsciously, to appear non-autistic in order to blend in and be more accepted in society. Masking can happen in formal situations such as at school or work and in informal situations such as at home with family or socialising with friends.

Do people with Asperger's have empathy? It is a common misconception that those of us on the Autism spectrum lack empathy. This is both incorrect and unfortunate in that many medical “experts” unintentionally perpetuate this fallacy. It is important to understand that there is not one kind of empathy.

Are Asperger's children gifted? However, some gifted children are twice exceptional. Their unique behaviours and characteristics may be the presentation of another condition, such as a learning disability or Asperger's Syndrome (part of a range of conditions included in Autism Spectrum Disorder).

Do people with Asperger's love their parents? Autistic children love their parents. You may have to learn to see how your child expresses affection and not take it personally if your child doesn't show affection in the way that typical children do.

What are the three main symptoms of Asperger's?

What is the average age of Aspergers? Asperger's symptoms start early in life. Most diagnoses happen between ages 5 and 9, although some people are adults before they get their diagnosis. No two people have the same symptoms. But they're usually related to emotional, communication, and behavioral skills.

What does high-functioning Asperger's look like? Symptoms of High-Functioning Autism. They don't make much eye contact or small talk. People on the spectrum who are high-functioning can also be very devoted to routine and order. They might have repetitive and restrictive habits that seem odd to others. There's a wide range of how they do with school and work.

How can you tell the difference between Aspergers and autism? Asperger's differs from autism in one significant way; children with Asperger's may have less severe symptoms and no language delay. In fact, people with Asperger's may even have advanced speech and language skills, but poor pragmatic or socially appropriate language.

Do people with Aspergers act younger than they are? Autistic people, at every age and severity level, tend to be “young for their age.” In other words, they have at least some interests, behaviors, and emotional responses that would be expected in a much younger person.
