Question 1: Explain the concept of a population and a sample.

Answer: A population is the entire group of individuals or objects being studied. A sample is a smaller, representative subset of the population that is used to make inferences about the entire population.

Question 2: What is the difference between descriptive and inferential statistics?

Answer: Descriptive statistics summarize and describe data, while inferential statistics make predictions or inferences about a population based on sample data.

Question 3: What are the four types of measurement scales?

Answer: Nominal, ordinal, interval, and ratio.

Question 4: How to calculate the mean and standard deviation of a data set?

Answer: The mean is the sum of the data values divided by the number of values. The standard deviation measures the spread or variability of the data. The formula for the standard deviation is the square root of the variance, which is the sum of the squared differences between each data value and the mean, divided by the number of values minus one.

Question 5: What is the role of probability in statistical inference?

Answer: Probability is used to determine the likelihood of an event occurring. In statistical inference, it is used to make predictions and assess the significance of results. The probability of an event is a number between 0 and 1, where 0 represents an impossible event and 1 represents a certain event.
