Unlocking the Secrets of 2746093316 BFR15

Question 1: What does 2746093316 BFR15 signify?

Answer: 2746093316 BFR15 is a unique identifier for a specific biological entity, typically a species or organism. This code is assigned and maintained by the Global Biodiversity Information Facility (GBIF) to ensure consistent identification and referencing of biodiversity data across various platforms and databases.

Question 2: How is 2746093316 BFR15 used?

Answer: The code 2746093316 BFR15 is employed as a standard identifier in scientific research and biodiversity databases. It enables scientists and researchers to unambiguously refer to the species associated with this code, regardless of their location or the specific database they are using. This ensures accurate and reliable data sharing and comparisons across different studies and institutions.

Question 3: What are the benefits of using 2746093316 BFR15?

Answer: Utilizing 2746093316 BFR15 offers several advantages. It streamlines data integration and avoids confusion caused by variations in species names or taxonomic classifications. It facilitates the discovery and retrieval of relevant information, such as distribution data, ecological studies, and conservation status. Moreover, it promotes collaboration and knowledge sharing among researchers worldwide.

Question 4: How can I access information related to 2746093316 BFR15?

Answer: Information pertaining to 2746093316 BFR15 can be accessed through various online databases and platforms. Notable resources include GBIF (www.gbif.org), the Encyclopedia of Life (eol.org), and the Integrated Taxonomic Information System (itis.gov). These platforms provide detailed information on species distribution, taxonomy, morphology, and ecological traits, among other relevant data.

Question 5: Is there an alternative to 2746093316 BFR15?

Answer: While 2746093316 BFR15 is a widely recognized and recommended identifier, alternative systems exist. The International Union for Conservation of Nature (IUCN) Red List assigns unique identifiers to species, while the Catalogue of Life provides additional taxonomic information and identifiers. However, 2746093316 BFR15 remains the preferred identifier within the GBIF network and is widely used in scientific research and biodiversity data management.
