Download Complete File

What did Jean Aitchison believe? Jean simply believes that language naturally decays and erodes over time. The three metaphors here are three theories which Jean disagrees with. "... implies that the language of English was gradually and lovingly assembled until it reached a point of maximum splendour at some unspecified time in the past.

Is Jean Aitchison a prescriptivist? Aitchison's prescriptivist attitudes Aitchison created 3 models to describe attitudes towards language change. However it is important to note that Aitchison does not believe that language change is any of these things – quite the opposite – she is a descriptivist. These are attitudes which prescriptivists have.

What are the stages of linguistic development according to Aitchison? In Aitchison (1987), she identifies three stages that occur during a child's acquisition of vocabulary: labelling, packaging and network building.

Why can't children learn language through imitation? Chomsky points out that a child could not possibly learn a language through imitation alone because the language spoken around them is highly irregular – adult's speech is often broken up and even sometimes ungrammatical.

What are Jean Aitchisons metaphors? Aitchison suggests that the "crumbling castle", "damp spoon" and "infectious disease" approaches are exhibited by many prescriptivist thinkers. The "Crumbling Castle" myth likens the English language to a castle. It suggests that although English was once a great castle, over time it has decayed and crumbled.

What do Prescriptivists believe about language? Simply put, prescriptivism is an attitude that prescribes how language should be and how you, as its speaker, must use it. A prescriptivist most often promotes Standard English or a similar variety.

Who said language change is inevitable? Roman Jakobson – Russian Linguist – 1949 – “Continual language change is natural and inevitable, and is due to a combination of psycholinguistic and sociolinguistic factors.”

What are Aitchison criteria for language? Aitchison (1983) proposed four unique criteria distinguishing human language from animal communication. These include displacement, structure dependence, semanticity and creativity.

What is language according to Aitchison? According to Aitchison, language is the specialized sound signaling system which seems to be genetically programmed to develop in humans.

What is Aitchison child language theory? They start with a hypernym (fruit) and explores hyponyms (apple). Aitchison believes that as all babies start communicating in the same way with crying, they must follow a similar pattern to acquire language. She believes that the speed of learning is influenced by both innate abilities and environment.

What does Chomsky say about language development? Chomsky believed that language is innate, or in other words, we are born with a capacity for language. Language rules are influenced by experience and learning, but the capacity for language itself exists with or without environmental influences.

What is Piaget's theory of language acquisition? The Swiss psychologist Jean Piaget placed acquisition of language within the context of a child's mental or cognitive development. He argued that a child has to understand a concept before s/he can acquire the particular language form which expresses that concept.

Why can't we learn languages like babies? Children have to learn the mechanics of their mother tongue, while as adults have a more developed grasp of how language works. After all, almost all of us know what conjugations or adjectives are. What's more, adults are outstanding pattern finding machines - it's much easier for us to deduce and apply language rules!
