The New Graphic Design School: Q&A

What is the New Graphic Design School?

The New Graphic Design School is a pioneering educational institution that challenges traditional approaches to graphic design education. It emphasizes critical thinking, collaboration, and the exploration of emerging technologies to equip students with the skills and mindset necessary to thrive in the evolving design landscape.

How does the New Graphic Design School differ from traditional programs?

Unlike traditional programs that prioritize technical proficiency, the New Graphic Design School focuses on developing students' intellectual curiosity, analytical abilities, and problem-solving skills. It recognizes that in an increasingly interconnected and complex society, designers must be able to think critically, communicate effectively, and adapt to changing industry landscapes.

What are the key principles of the New Graphic Design School?

- Transdisciplinary Approach: Blending design thinking with other disciplines such as social sciences, technology, and business to foster innovation and relevance.
- Critical Inquiry: Facilitating discussions, research, and collaboration to encourage students to question assumptions and explore alternative perspectives.

- Experimentation and Innovation: Creating a safe and supportive environment for students to experiment with new ideas, technologies, and methodologies.
- Collaboration: Emphasizing teamwork and interdisciplinary collaboration to prepare students for the collaborative nature of real-world projects.

What are the benefits of attending the New Graphic Design School?

Students who attend the New Graphic Design School graduate with:

- Strong critical thinking and problem-solving abilities.
- The ability to adapt to changing technologies and industry trends.
- A deep understanding of the social and cultural implications of design.
- A network of peers and mentors who share their passion for design.

Who should consider attending the New Graphic Design School?

Individuals seeking a transformative design education that will equip them with the skills and mindset to excel in the 21st-century creative economy are ideal candidates for the New Graphic Design School. This includes aspiring designers, professionals looking to advance their careers, and individuals from diverse backgrounds interested in the power of design to impact society.
