Services Marketing: Zeithaml's 6th Edition Q&A

Question 1: Describe the key differences between goods and services.

Answer: Goods are tangible products that can be physically possessed, while services are intangible experiences. Goods are typically manufactured, while services are performed. Goods can be inventoried, while services cannot.

Question 2: What is the service-profit chain?

Answer: The service-profit chain is a series of relationships that link employee satisfaction to customer satisfaction and loyalty, which in turn leads to improved profitability. It suggests that companies that invest in their employees will ultimately reap rewards in terms of customer loyalty and financial success.

Question 3: What are the three core dimensions of service quality?

Answer: The three core dimensions of service quality, according to Zeithaml, are reliability, responsiveness, and empathy. Reliability refers to the ability of a service provider to perform the promised service accurately and consistently. Responsiveness relates to the willingness and ability of the provider to assist customers promptly and effectively. Empathy involves understanding and meeting the specific needs of each customer.

Question 4: What are the four Ps of services marketing?

Answer: The four Ps of services marketing are:

- Product: The core service and any supplementary services offered.
- Price: The monetary value assigned to the service.
- Place: The channels through which the service is delivered.
- Promotion: The activities used to communicate with customers and create awareness of the service.

Question 5: What are the key challenges in services marketing?

Answer: Some of the key challenges in services marketing include:

- Intangibility: Services cannot be physically seen or touched, making it difficult to communicate their value.
- Perishability: Services are typically consumed at the time of production, making it impossible to inventory or store them.
- Heterogeneity: Services are often unique and difficult to standardize, leading to variability in the customer experience.
- Customer involvement: Services often require active involvement from the customer, which can affect the quality of the experience.
