Q&A: Exploring the TM3 and iOpscience Collaboration

Q1: What is TM3?

A1: TM3 (The Materials Modeler) is an online platform that provides researchers and practitioners with a comprehensive suite of materials science simulation tools and data. It offers access to a range of models, databases, and analytics capabilities for investigating the properties and behavior of materials.

Q2: What is iOpscience?

A2: iOpscience is a leading publisher of scientific research in the fields of physics, materials science, and engineering. It provides open access to peer-reviewed journals, conference proceedings, and other scientific publications, enabling researchers to share and discover the latest advancements in these disciplines.

Q3: How do TM3 and iOpscience collaborate?

A3: TM3 and iOpscience have collaborated to create a seamless connection between materials simulation and scientific publishing. Researchers using TM3 can directly export their simulation results and data as publications in iOpscience journals. This integration streamlines the research workflow and ensures the reproducibility and dissemination of materials science findings.

Q4: What are the benefits of this collaboration?

A4: The TM3-iOpscience collaboration offers several benefits:

- Accelerated scientific communication: Researchers can publish their findings with minimal delay, enabling the rapid exchange of knowledge and innovation.
- Enhanced data sharing and transparency: The platform ensures the open access and availability of materials simulation data, promoting transparency and reproducibility in research.
- Improved collaboration: The integration allows researchers to connect with a wider scientific community, facilitating cross-disciplinary collaborations and knowledge creation.

Q5: How can I access the TM3-iOpscience services?

A5: Researchers can access TM3's simulation tools and data repository at <https://tm3.dev>. Groups can also register for the Joint Publishing Platform between TM3 and iOpscience at <https://submit.iopsience.iop.org/> to seamlessly publish their simulation results.
