What is the earliest known archaeological evidence of our ancestral origins in East Africa? Earliest human remains in eastern Africa dated to more than 230,000 years ago. A view of the Omo-Kibish geological formation in southwestern Ethiopia.

What is colonial Archaeology? The archaeological study of colonial settings uses material evidence in addition to evidence from environmental and landscape records, historical sources, oral histories, and pictorial sources. The focus on material evidence poses serious challenges and opportunities.

Why do archaeologists think the first humans came from Africa? Humans are found on every continent in the world, but the reason we think our ancestors came from Africa is because of both fossil and DNA evidence. We've looked for fossils from our ancient human ancestors all over the world. Of all of these, the oldest fossils we've discovered were found in Africa.

What African culture has the earliest evidence for civilization in West Africa? The Nok culture was one of the earliest known societies of Western Africa. It existed in modern-day Nigeria from around 500 B.C.E. to 200 C.E. The Nok farmed crops and used iron tools.

What is the relationship between archaeology and colonialism? Archaeology was instrumental in legitimizing scientific racism through pseudoscientific practices such as skull measuring. It also helped create narratives about the inferiority of colonized groups based on their ancestors' material culture.

How is archeology a source of African history? Important historical evidence is provided by the earth's geography and description as well as the materials culture found in ancient sites. This evidence is used to reconstruct important historical facts. Thus archaeology allowed historians to piece together the past when written sources were scarce or incomplete.

What is the anthropology of colonialism? Anthropologists mostly think of colonialism in three ways: as the universal, evolutionary progress of modernization; as a particular strategy or experiment in domination and exploitation; and as the unfinished business of struggle and negotiation.

What evidence do we have that the earliest humans lived in Africa? The oldest fully modern H. sapiens skulls, dating to at least 233,000 years ago, were found in Ethiopia's Omo Valley. "Lucy," the 3.2-million-year-old Australopithecus afarensis, was also unearthed in Ethiopia. The earliest stone tools, dated to 3.3 million years old, were discovered in Kenya.

When did humans first appear in East Africa? sapiens, probably appeared in east Africa about 200,000 years ago. Alternatively, some archaeologists argued from cultural evidence that our species had originated in southern Africa.

What is the earliest evidence of hominins out of Africa? The oldest known human skeletal remains outside of Africa are from Dmanisi, Georgia (Dmanisi skull 4), and are dated to 1.8 Ma. These remains are classified as Homo erectus georgicus.

What is the earliest known evidence of human ancestors? The earliest fossils argued by some to belong to the human lineage are Sahelanthropus tchadensis (7 Ma) and Orrorin tugenensis (6 Ma), followed by Ardipithecus (5.5–4.4 Ma), with species Ar. kadabba and Ar. ramidus.
