The Road to Hell: An Interview with Michael Maren

Q: What inspired you to write "The Road to Hell"?

A: The book is a culmination of years of experience working in war zones and witnessing the horrors that humans inflict upon each other. I wanted to share the stories of those who have been affected by war and to explore the complex moral dilemmas that arise in such situations.

Q: What are some of the most striking images you encountered in your research?

A: The scenes of violence and destruction were overwhelming. I saw burned-out villages, mass graves, and the shattered bodies of victims. The most haunting image, however, was that of a child soldier who had been forced to kill his own father.

Q: How did witnessing these horrors impact your own life?

A: It was a deeply transformative experience. It shattered my illusions about the world and forced me to confront the dark side of human nature. It also instilled in me a deep sense of compassion for those who have suffered and a determination to use my voice to speak out against injustice.

Q: What do you believe are the underlying causes of war?

A: War is a multifaceted phenomenon with many contributing factors. However, I believe that the root of it lies in the human desire for power and control. Greed, fear, and intolerance all play a role in fueling conflicts.

Q: What message do you hope readers will take away from your book?

A: I hope that "The Road to Hell" will challenge readers to think critically about the human condition and the choices they make. I want them to understand the devastating consequences of war and to question the idea that it is ever a necessary evil. Ultimately, I hope that the book will inspire people to work towards a more just and peaceful world.
