Her work challenges traditional notions of identity, subjectivity, and the human condition, exploring the transformative potential of emerging technologies and scientific advancements.

Q: What is the concept of the posthuman according to Braidotti? A: Braidotti's posthuman is a critical and inclusive concept that envisions a future where human identity is no longer defined by essentialist categories such as gender, race, or biological determinism. Instead, the posthuman embraces plurality, fluidity, and the interconnections between humans and nonhuman entities, such as technology and the environment.

Q: How does Braidotti connect the posthuman with feminism? A: Braidotti sees the posthuman as a radical project of feminist transformation. By deconstructing conventional notions of the human, feminism can challenge patriarchal structures and create a more equitable and inclusive society.
