Why does my vacuum stop working after a few minutes? A damaged vacuum hose, clogged motor air filter or bad suction motor can cause the vacuum cleaner to shut off during use. A tripped overload on the vacuum suction motor can shut off the vacuum cleaner during use. If your vacuum has a reset button, push it; if the vacuum seems hot, let it cool off first.

Why does my vacuum keep shutting off? If your vacuum cleaner keeps turning off, this could be due to the following reasons: Blockages - check the hose and head for any obstructions. Filter - always check your filters, if these are clogged this could be causing the vacuum cleaner to work harder and lose suction power.

How do you troubleshoot a vacuum?

Why has my vacuum just stopped working? Check that the vacuum cleaner is plugged into a working power outlet and that fuses and breakers don't need resetting. An activated thermal cut-out due to a blockage is the next most likely cause of the problem. Check for blockages in the hose and filters, and remove any obstructions that you find.

Why won't my vacuum pick up anything? Take the hose and attachments apart to see if there is a foreign item, a dust or hair ball restricting the air flow. You can unblock the hose with the help of a long stick or a broom handle. Check the hose for any damage as air seeping through a crack or tear will cause loss of suction.
