Does the government have the right to take some of our personal liberties away for the good of the entire country? The 4th Amendment doesn't say we'll be free of all searches and seizures, but only of unreasonable ones. So yes, some degree of limitation of personal liberty for national security is reasonable and necessary.

What term is used to describe personal freedoms that the government Cannot infringe upon? Civil liberties protect individuals against government actions that infringe upon certain fundamental rights. The Constitution established several civil liberties, including freedom of speech, freedom of religion, and the right to bear arms.

Who said a bill of rights is what the people are entitled to against every government and what no just government should refuse or rest on inference? a bill of rights is what the people are entitled to against every government on earth, general or particular, and what no just government should refuse, or rest on inference. RC (DLC: Madison Papers).

What is the term for rights and freedoms which the government Cannot infringe upon? Civil liberties protect people from undue government interference or action. Civil rights, on the other hand, protect people from discrimination.

Can the government take away your natural rights? Locke wrote that all individuals are equal in the sense that they are born with certain "inalienable" natural rights. That is, rights that are God-given and can never be taken or even given away.

Why can the government take away your rights? The government only limits our rights in particular scenarios. These primarily include instances in which exercising the right causes harm to others. It also can include instances where the right is almost impossible to protect, like our right to privacy when in public spaces.

What personal freedoms are protected by law from the actions of a government? Your First Amendment right - freedom of speech, association and assembly; freedom of the press, and freedom of religion. Your Second Amendment - right to keep and bear arms. Your Fourth Amendment - right to privacy - freedom from unwarranted government intrusion into your personal and private affairs.

What does the Constitution say about personal freedoms? Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

How does the constitution protect the rights of individuals against government? It spells out Americans' rights in relation to their government. It guarantees civil rights and liberties to the individual—like freedom of speech, press, and religion. It sets rules for due process of law and reserves all powers not delegated to the Federal Government to the people or the States.

Who does the Bill of Rights limit the power of? The Bill of Rights consists of 10 amendments that explicitly guarantee certain rights and protections to US citizens by limiting the power of the federal government.

Does the Bill of Rights only apply to the government? Originally the Constitution applied only to the federal government. That changed with the ratification of the 14th Amendment, it now applies to state and local governments also.

Does the Bill of Rights protect everyone? The Bill of Rights seemed to be written in broad language that excluded no one, but in fact, it was not intended to protect all the people - whole groups were left out.

Can the government take away your liberty? No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.

Does the Constitution say we have the right to overthrow the government? That whenever any form of government becomes destructive to these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their safety and happiness.

Can the government take away inalienable rights? “If a right is inalienable, it is not the kind which a temporal government can grant or take away. Such inalienable rights were not part of the social contract 'bargain': government could at best secure them, but it could provide no substitute for them or impetus to trade them away.”

What right can the government not take away? We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness.
