How to set up Bose Companion 3?

Can I use Bose Companion 3 without a control pod? Unfortunately the control pod or "puck" does need to be used, as it completes the signal circuit in the Bose subwoofer and provides volume control. Without the pod the audio input is "open" (meaning the pod completes the circuit).

When did the Bose Companion 3 come out? The "Companion 3" system was released in 2003 and consisted of two satellite speakers and a subwoofer. Control is via a wired remote. Dual inputs allow two sources to be played simultaneously, however it is not possible to adjust the relative level of each source. The "Companion 3 Series II" was introduced in 2006.

How do you reboot on a Bose? On your headphones, press and hold the Power/Bluetooth® button. While continuing to hold the button, connect the USB cable to the right earcup. The Power light on your headphones will quickly blink twice. Once connected, wait two seconds and then release the Power/Bluetooth button.

Why is there no sound on my Bose companion? Be sure the system has power and is on. Check the control pod to see if the LED is green. This indicates the system is on. If the LED is yellow, the system is either muted or headphones are connected to the control pod. Tap the control pod to unmute the system or disconnect the headphones from the control pod.

How do I put my Bose in setup mode? If a Bose app or instructions ask you to put your system in Setup mode: On the top of your speaker, simultaneously touch and hold the AUX and Play/Pause buttons. Wait while the light bar simulates a 5 second countdown by changing size every second. Once complete, it blink white twice and glows amber.

How do I connect my Bose companion?

How to connect Bose Companion 3 series II to computer? Insert the connector on one end of the supplied audio input cable into the jack labeled From Computer on the rear of the module. Connect the other end to the audio output jack on your computer (Figure 7).

How do I reset my Bose earbuds to factory settings? With the case open and earbuds inside, press and hold the Bluetooth button on the back of the case for 30 seconds (The earbuds status light will blink blue while holding the button). Then the status light will blink white 2 times, slowly blink blue, and then turns off. Release the button.
