The Color of Love: Racial Features, Stigma, and Socialization in Black Brazilian Families

By Louann Atkins, Temple University

In her groundbreaking book, "The Color of Love: Racial Features, Stigma, and Socialization in Black Brazilian Families," Louann Atkins examines the complex relationship between racial identity, social stigma, and family dynamics in Brazil. Atkins argues that the stigma attached to certain racial features, such as darker skin, wider noses, and fuller lips, has a profound impact on the socialization of black Brazilian children.

1. How does the stigmatization of certain racial features affect black Brazilian children?

Atkins' research reveals that children with stigmatized racial features experience lower self-esteem, social isolation, and academic underachievement compared to their peers. They may internalize negative stereotypes and become ashamed of their physical appearance.

2. What role do families play in mitigating the stigma associated with racial features?

Despite the societal stigma, Atkins highlights the critical role of families in providing a positive and supportive environment for black children. By fostering a sense of pride in their heritage and celebrating their unique beauty, families can help counteract the negative messages that children receive from the outside world.

3. How does the colorism within Brazilian society influence family dynamics?

Colorism, a form of discrimination based on skin tone, is deeply ingrained in Brazilian culture. Families may inadvertently perpetuate colorism by showing favoritism towards lighter-skinned children or making disparaging remarks about darker skin. This can lead to conflicts and divisions within families.

4. What are the implications for social work practice?

Atkins' research has important implications for social workers working with black Brazilian families. It highlights the need for culturally sensitive interventions that address the unique challenges faced by these families. Social workers can empower families to develop strategies for coping with stigma and promoting positive racial identity.

5. Conclusion

Atkins' work provides a nuanced understanding of the complex dynamics of racial identity, stigma, and socialization in black Brazilian families. By shedding light on the challenges and resilience of these families, her research contributes to the advancement of social justice and the promotion of racial equity in Brazil and beyond.

The Great Partition: Making of India and Pakistan

By Yasmin Khan

Q: What was the Great Partition? A: The Great Partition was the division of British India into the independent nations of India and Pakistan on August 15, 1947. The partition was based on religious lines, with India becoming a predominantly Hindu state and Pakistan a predominantly Muslim state.

Q: What were the reasons for the Partition? A: The Partition was the result of growing tensions between Hindus and Muslims in British India. These tensions were exacerbated by the British policy of "divide and rule," which encouraged communal divisions.

Q: How was the Partition implemented? A: The Partition was implemented through the Indian Independence Act of 1947, which divided British India into two dominions, India and Pakistan. The boundaries between the two countries were drawn by a British commission headed by Sir Cyril Radcliffe.

Q: What were the consequences of the Partition? A: The Partition led to the displacement of millions of people and the death of hundreds of thousands in communal violence. The Partition also created a lasting legacy of tension between India and Pakistan.

Q: What is the historical significance of the Partition? A: The Great Partition remains one of the most significant events in the history of the Indian subcontinent. It shaped the political, social, and economic landscape of the region and continues to be a source of historical debate and analysis.

Writing Excel Macros with VBA: A Beginner's Guide

What is VBA?

VBA (Visual Basic for Applications) is a programming language built into Microsoft Office applications, including Excel. It allows you to automate tasks and enhance the functionality of your spreadsheets.

Why use VBA Macros?

VBA macros can streamline repetitive or complex tasks, saving you time and effort. They can also perform advanced data manipulation, formatting, and analysis that would be difficult or impossible to do manually.

How to Create a VBA Macro

To create a VBA macro, open the VBA Editor (Alt + F11). In the left pane, select the worksheet you want to associate the macro with. In the right pane, click "Insert" >

"Module". Enter your VBA code in the module.

Common VBA Commands

Here are some basic VBA commands:

- MsgBox: Displays a message box with a specified message.
- Range: Selects a range of cells.
- ActiveCell: Refers to the currently active cell.
- FormatCells: Formats the selected cells.
- For Loop: Executes a block of code multiple times for each item in a range or array.

Troubleshooting

If your VBA macro is not working as expected, try the following:

- Check for syntax errors (e.g., missing parentheses).
- Use the debugger (F8) to step through your code line by line.
- Look for any references to incorrect cell ranges or worksheet names.
- Make sure the macro has been assigned to a button or event trigger on your worksheet.

Are beautiful people more likely to have daughters? Being physically attractive at age 7 increases the odds of having a daughter by 23% or decreases the odds of having a son by 19%. Similarly, net of the same control variables, being physically unattractive at age 7 decreases the odds of having a daughter by 20% or increases the odds of having a son by 25%.

Why do beautiful people have more daughters in psychology? It appears that natural selection does help individual genes to spread, by subtly biasing the offspring sex ratio so that beautiful people, who can benefit from having a daughter, do indeed have slightly more daughters than ugly people, who cannot so benefit.

Who is more likely to have a daughter? The overall picture is that the older the parents (both the mother and the father), the more likely they are to have a daughter.

Who is more likely to have a girl? Almost everyone has around a 50% chance of having a boy and a 50% chance of having a girl. What we can say is that dad's sperm determines whether a baby will be born as a boy or a girl. About half of his sperm will make a boy and half a girl. The sex of the baby depends on which sperm gets to the egg first.

Are babies more attracted to pretty faces? Human infants, just a few days of age, are known to prefer attractive human faces.

Why are pretty people more likeable? Enhanced first impressions. Those who are considered attractive are often perceived more positively, a phenomenon known as the "halo effect". This psychological bias leads people to assume that physically attractive people possess other desirable traits such as intelligence, kindness, and competency.

Are some people more prone to having daughters? "The family tree study showed that whether you're likely to have a boy or a girl is inherited. We now know that men are more likely to have sons if they have more brothers but are more likely to have daughters if they have more sisters. However, in women, you just can't predict it," Mr Gellatly explains.
